

Editorial

Welcome to Mrida-the first multi-disciplinary international Journal from the Department of Higher Education, Haryana.

Mrida marks a milestone in the Higher Education Department's journey towards achieving academic proficiency. It reflects the department's endeavor to initiate, promote and encourage integrative learning and advancing the field of education and research. Most importantly, it seeks to provide to its faculty a broad-based, wide spectrum outreach with both national and international readership, through an in-house publication.

The journal reflects the vitality of our vibrant teaching community. It aims to stimulate minds, provide direction to beginners in the field of research, encourage fresh write-ups and incorporate academic content, scholarly essays and critical reviews within its flaps. It welcomes original articles on issues arising at the intersection of nations, states, civil societies and global institutions, processes and crisis, from across all disciplines. So, looking forward to your original submissions.

Mrida has received widespread support from innumerable quarters. My deepest and most profound gratitude to each one involved in the making and shaping of this journal.

Your honest and constructive comments are welcome and appreciated and will go a long way in cementing the layout of this journal.

Mrida is now in your hands and it is just the beginning.

To happy times!!

Hemant Verma and Anju Manocha